Suzuki RACESAFE Medical Team gets a helping hand.

The Suzuki RACESAFE Medical Team is well known to everyone in the ASBK paddock for the helping hand they have provided to riders of the Australian Superbike Championships for many years now. Though on this occasion it was the Suzuki RACESAFE Medical Team being given the helping hand by the Reece Bancell Memorial Association.

The Reece Bancell Memorial Association has a long history of supporting rider safety via equipment donations and fund raising for Motorsport Medical teams around the country. Their support of the Suzuki RACESAFE Medical Team extends over many years with a constant dedication to rider safety.

“On behalf of the entire Suzuki RACESAFE Medical Team, my thanks to the committee of the RBMA. We are very proud of this long running relationship. Their support has been a strong backbone to our work at every ASBK round.

Just step inside our Mobile Medical Unit and you will see hanging on the walls vital medical equipment which represents the hard work of the RBMA fund raising. These important donations go directly to help the riders of our exciting sport.

I have said it before, but without the support of the RBMA and our other supporters and major sponsors - Suzuki Australia, AirRoad, Volvo Trucks, Motul and BOC Medical we would never make it to the track to provide our critical medical services. We consider these companies to be our “Rider Safety Partners”. Remarked Simon Maas, RACESAFE Director of Emergency Services.

The Suzuki RACESAFE Medical Team comprises of -

- Trauma Doctors
- Orthopaedic Surgeons
- Intensive Care Paramedics
- Emergency Nurses
- Physiotherapists

This highly skilled team of medical professionals all donate their time as expert volunteers. They all share a common passion for motorcycle racing and rider safety.

The state of the art onsite medical facilities include a Sports Medicine treatment area and the Suzuki RACESAFE Mobile Medical Unit which proudly displays the RBMA logo.

The ASBK Medical Program and commitment to safety by series promoter - IEG, will see the vastly experienced Suzuki RACESAFE Medical Team at each round of the 2010 Australian Superbike Championships.
